A perfection which has no limit will now and again create ~~another~~.
However this diversity which signifies no impairment of perfection ^{since} for the created contains in itself the perfection of the creating -

And this which gradually draws - brings - attracts - directs it back to its origin.

relationships, into the existence of nature which is a boundary-wave, a suspension of the infinite uniformity of space. This wave, though boundary, will work always with the unlimited sea of consciousness from every one of its infinite germinations. In all the places of her action, and in the wave will come to that state of perfect
